AMERICAN POLITICS.

Religious Press Almost Solidly Arrayed Against Cleveland.

COMMENT ON THE ACCEPTANCE LETTER

[illegible] Presents a Baby with a Silver Cup—Proceedings of State Conventions—News and Gossip.

New York, Aug. 21.—[Special.]—The Sun this [illegible] under the head of "Religious Denunciations" [illegible] calls on Mr. Cleveland to withdraw [illegible] for president, and prints extracts from [illegible] religious organs, Catholic and Protestant. [illegible] says constitutes a most noteworthy fea[illegible] unprecedented canvass. "This week a [illegible] says: "We were ready with real enthusiasm [illegible] support the tried and, as we then believed, [illegible] reformer, Grover Cleveland. Now, without [illegible] in derogation of his record as a governor, [illegible] our enthusiasm is wiped out by the dis[illegible] and acknowledgment of awful facts." The Congregationalist says: "If it were true that [illegible] had been, we to have abandoned him [illegible] or eight years ago, and to have lived [illegible] believing at present at upright life, very [illegible] people would refuse to bring up the dark fact [illegible] history against him now, but leaving out the [illegible] and Rev. Mr. Ball's charges, we are [illegible] receiving new evidence in the matter [illegible] to its condemnation of Cleveland [illegible] which nominated Governor Cleveland [illegible] demand that he be withdrawn from the ticket [illegible] new made."

The Catholic Universe of Cleveland, Ohio, the Cat[illegible] and the St. Mary's Institute Journal [illegible] are quoted to the same effect. Also the [illegible] Zion's Herald and the Morning [illegible] paper, are each calling for Cleve[illegible] withdrawal.

THE JOURNAL OF COMMERCE

New York, Aug. 21.—Special.—The Journal of Commerce, democratic, says this morning: "The letter of Governor Cleveland to the official notice of [illegible] is short, manly, unequivocal and sin[illegible] free from the art of the politician. On [illegible] it will create less enthusiasm among [illegible] than the more glowing utterances of [illegible] candidates. It is not in its composition as [illegible] Mr. Blaine nor as well calcu[illegible] the popular heart. He introduces the [illegible] against Chinese emigration, which has [illegible] reason or justice in it when he makes [illegible] between foreigners who come here to [illegible] allegiance to our government and to [illegible] number of our citizens, and those who [illegible] to become Americans. Our readers [illegible] own answer to this plea. We believe the [illegible] would become attached to this government [illegible] among us as permanent citizens if [illegible] them with common decency, and gave [illegible] opportunities we offer to other emigrants."

HENDRICKS DOES THE CORRECT THING.

New York, Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Mr. and Mrs. W[illegible] [illegible] was born at the very hour Hendricks [illegible] nominated for vice president, and named the [illegible] him. Yesterday the parents received the [illegible] letter:

Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York.

[illegible] Mrs. Bach.—For the honor you do me [illegible] my name on your boy I beg to present [illegible] cup, with his name inscribed, and ex[illegible] wish and hope that his life may be a pro[illegible] happy one. Very respectfully,

THOMAS A. HENDRICKS.

Accompanying the letter was a silver cup, duly in[illegible]

JEFF DAVIS MAKES A SPEECH.

[illegible], Aug. 21.—[Special.]—At the nominat[illegible] convention of the state of Mississippi Jeff Davis [illegible] as a visitor, and made a speech. He [illegible] always happy when he found himself [illegible] Mississippians. Never, in the history of the [illegible] has Mississippi been called before on [illegible] for peculation in office. In the war [illegible] Mississippi had borne the brunt of the [illegible] her sons had never flinched [illegible] the honor of the state been impugned. [illegible] who criticised her conduct in regard [illegible] debt before the war. In reply to such he [illegible] what he always said on that subject, [illegible] is a debt and Mississippi will pay it.

AN IRISHMAN'S DENIAL.

[illegible], Ky., Aug. 21.—William M. Collins of [illegible] delegate of the Irish national league con[illegible] recently held in Boston, in an interview rel[illegible] the proposition to trade the Irish American [illegible] advancement of Ireland's cause, as con[illegible] press dispatches, denied that such a propo[illegible] entertained by the league and that no one [illegible] in the alleged conference acted with [illegible] Mr. Collins said it was understood by the [illegible] Irish affairs would be kept separate from [illegible] politics.

GRADY RESIGNS.

New York, Aug. 21.—Ex-Senator Theodore Grady [illegible] Chairman Manning his resignation as [illegible] of the democratic state committee. Grady [illegible] but fair I should add that this action is [illegible] personal on my part and does not in any [illegible] any organization to whose representa[illegible] eligible for membership in the commit[illegible] communicated my determination in this [illegible] chairman of the Tammany hall dele[illegible] last state convention.

BUTLER'S STRENGTH.

[illegible], Aug. 21.—[Special.]—A private conference [illegible] of Butler's party to-day developed such [illegible] strength for the people's candidate that [illegible] possible that Cleveland democrats may [illegible] third in the list when the popular [illegible] state is returned.

Resolutions were unanimously adopted. [illegible] committee of seven was then appointed to con[illegible] with the committee appointed last night by the [illegible] convention.

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST.

Western Oregon

On Saturday, August 16th, Mrs. Nancy S. Holcomb, one of the oldest pioneers of this state, died at the residence of Mr. James Brown, at Tracy's, in Clackamas county. Mrs. Holcomb was born in St. Lawrence county, New York, in 1805; moved from there to Ashtabula county, Ohio, August 24, 1831; married and moved to Illinois in 1836, and from there to Oregon in 1848, with ox teams, arriving in Oregon City in October of that year, and has lived on a farm four miles from there ever since. She leaves two sons, Albert Holcomb, of Lone Rock, Wasco county, Oregon, and Walter L. Holcomb, who still lives on the old parental homestead, and they have thirteen children. Mrs. Holcomb will be remembered by all old settlers who came to Oregon in early days over the Cascade mountains by the Barlow route, as the great majority usually camped near the house and procured food for themselves and [illegible] for their teams before arriving at the then metropolis of Oregon, Oregon City.

[illegible] Still, of Highland, died last Tuesday morning at the Barlow house in Oregon City. Mr. Still was about fifty-two years old, an old settler and a good citizen.

Washington Territory

Tacoma [illegible]: Hop picking will begin in the valley in about ten days, and those who desire to see the incoming Indians in all their paint and gaudy colors should take a look at the crowd that are collected along the beach back of the wharf.

The republican county convention of Lincoln county met at Davenport on Saturday last, and after a warm, bitter contest elected the following delegates to the territorial convention, which convenes at Seattle on Thursday, September 4: Frank M. Gray, of Harrington; J. O. Burns, of Sprague; A. O. Friedlander, of Deente, and J. O. Small, of Cottonwood. A desperate effort was made by a few politicians to run the machine and exclude the country representation, but the farmers came off victorious.

At the recent meeting of the republican convention for Mason county the following candidates were placed in the field: County commissioners, Thomas Webb, E. A. Miller and John B. Forbes; sheriff, William Callow; school superintendent, M. A. E[illegible]; treasurer, A. F. Chapman; auditor, C. S. Brumbaugh; probate judge, Philip D. Moore; county surveyor, Alfred Jones; coroner, Vincent Finch. It was moved and carried that the selection of Judge John P. Hoyt, of Olympia, or Captain George D. Hill, of Seattle, as nominee for delegate to congress would be acceptable to the republicans of Mason county. The following resolution was adopted: Resolved, That we spare no honorable effort to secure the success of the party.

News of a fatal accident comes up from Skagit river, whereby Lewis Harrington lost his life. He was an old friend of Surveyor General McMicken, of Olympia, and accompanied by his wife, son and daughter had recently arrived on the Sound from Hutchinson, Minnesota. His family settled in Seattle, while Mr. Harrington started out to travel over the territory in order to obtain a personal knowledge and understanding of its inducements and advantages. Last Thursday afternoon, while climbing along the bank of the Skagit river, the earth gave way beneath him and he fell over a precipice of a distance of one hundred feet, striking head first upon a rock and being killed instantly. The body will be shipped back to Minnesota for interment.

Idaho

Young Bernard, who shot and killed John Enright some time ago at Murray, during a quarrel, is now closely confined in the jail at Lewiston. His trial will soon be called. Bernard is a young man twenty-six years of age, of prepossessing appearance, and a graduate of the University of California, and the scientific school at Harvard. Bernard's attorney will set up a plea of self defense.

SPINSTERS WITH A FORCE.

An Exhibition After the Lulu Hurst Style by the Marshall Sisters.

Philadelphia Times.

A [illegible] young woman in a white bonnet sat and played feeble tunes on an effete piano in front of the stage of the Arch Street opera house from 8 o'clock until a quarter after that hour last night. Then the curtain went up and a fat man in a spike tailed coat made some reference to two elderly spinsters at the back of the stage, who were named, he said, Josie and Clara Marshall. They had a force, a[illegible] to the fat man, but he did not know where it came from. The fat man was entirely rem[illegible] for what he did not know. This was the introduction of the Marshall sisters.

Several young men then came upon the stage. A fat and foolish young man in the audience began to be noisy, and the leader of the young men upon the stage wrestled with Miss Josie Marshall and a walking stick. Somebody in the audience who had read the New York papers shouted "spre[illegible]" and the young man after the tussling had subsided came off the stage and said, "This is humbugging."

The leader of the two spinsters then turned two umbrellas which were in the hands of [illegible] inside [illegible] Miss Josie tried in vain to prevent D[illegible] from putting a cane which she held [illegible] the floor. There was then an intermission. The audience began to imitate the vari[illegible] aids in [illegible] beer saloons. Then Miss Clara kept some young men from putting a chair which she held upon the floor. One of the young men pretended that he believed that the "[illegible]" and [illegible] him and made himself foolish in other ways.

In the last scene the Marshall sisters put a chair to the floor in spite of the efforts of Jack Burke, Jack Welsh and other presumable athletes.

PRESS PITH.

"N[illegible]" said Cleveland to Hendricks when they met for the first time. "New York has not got the cholera, but it has Tammany." "H[illegible]" said the Indiana statesman dubiously. "In my state an impression prevails that Tammany has New York." —Norristown Herald.

Harrisburg young ladies are delightfully naive. One of them went to see a doctor and the doctor was not at home. Miss Harrisburg saw upon the order slate "Please call at Blank's shoe store," and supposing that the man of prescriptions was there got her newly shod and went after him. —Philadelphia Progress.

Pa— My son, what is that you are drawing on your slate? Little Tom— Oh, it's only fun. What kind of fun? Political. Political, eh? Well what does it represent? Oh, nothing much. It's only a hick at the Independent party. [illegible] enough to be ashamed, my son, to strike at a little thing like that. Take a party of your size. —Philadelphia Call.

The word "Two" written with a capital T and the T only half erased [illegible] is like 100. An art critic describing a picture wrote: "Two women are sitting on a grassy bank." The typewriter misled by the half erased T set it up "100 women," [illegible] the proof reader doubting the size of the crowd [illegible] these figures to 2000. The art critic, with standing this extensive modification, is still not angry—in fact much crosser than his f[illegible] —Louisville Courier Journal.

What will be the prevailing style in dresses? said a family man of a fashionable milliner. "All dresses will be worn much shorter this year." "I am glad to hear it," said the man of family, "Everything [illegible] relief. I suppose they will be much cheaper." "By no means—they will cost more," said the milliner. "I don't understand how that can be." "Short dresses take less goods and should therefore cost less." "No, you are wrong; short dresses cost more, since they come higher." But the [illegible] family man would not be convinced. —New York Sun.

As a train pulled out of Kansas City recently, there boarded it a fine-looking gentleman, who stepped into the smoker, and was accosted by a rank [illegible] looking citizen, a Western humanity. "Going far, western stranger?" he asked. "Yes sir," replied the old gentleman politely. "I am going to Denver." "Business or pleasure?" "Chiefly for my health." "Ah, yes. I see. From the east, ain't yer?" "Yes, I am president of the Twenty-fifth National bank of New York." "Oh, I see, I expect to be late at the west, eh? Then he added in a whisper: "Gimme yer hand, old pard—I'm right glad to meet yer. I'm a Missouri train robber." —Drake's Magazine.

H in American Authorship.

Boston Advertiser.

H is a letter which expresses a good deal in American authorship, being identified with the names of Hallock, Hawthorne, Holmes and Howells, and thus a noble prominence is one of our brightest literary women, who has made the familiar signature H. H. a household word. A street which can number two of the above authors as residents must be considered singularly favored. Although Beacon street is generally associated with the abodes of fashion, [illegible] the historic and Holmes the poet and essayist have given it the higher interest of literature. Our readers will be glad to learn that the Autocrat of the Breakfast Table, has [illegible] abiding in this historic street in the person of the author of "Our Wedding Journey," and W. D. Howells. Henceforth no cockney should be allowed to drop the [illegible] in a locality thus honored by [illegible] the most [illegible] and [illegible] writers who use the English language, and who have invested the eighth letter of the alphabet with an abiding interest for all [illegible] familiar with the names and works of our noted living authors.

What Cambronne Really Said at Waterloo

By James Grant, in July [illegible]

"La Garde meurt, mais ne se rend pas!" was not as is well known said by Cambronne on the field of Waterloo, but was put into his mouth by [illegible] Rougemont in the columns of a newspaper called the Independent a few days after the battle. In the [illegible] scandal, a memoir of the Comte [illegible] just published in Switzerland, we learn what Cambronne did say according to the eye witness [illegible] to Gen. Millinet. [illegible] was [illegible] to lay down our arms [illegible] all [illegible] these words. [illegible] next [illegible] they were all dead.

A New York Bank President Quietly Runs Away.

THE CATTLE DISEASE SCARE IN ILLINOIS

Leprosy in an Eastern City—News About the Greely Party—The Atlantic and Pacific Purchase—Etc.

Albion, N. Y., Aug. 21.—Owing to the absence of the president the business of the First National bank of Albion is suspended by order of the board of directors until an examination can be had of its affairs.

It was ascertained that President A. S. Warren departed from Albion last Wednesday, taking with him the combination of the inner safe, and it is likely that his absence will continue for some time. The condition of the bank cannot be ascertained until a thorough examination is made and the safe opened. Great excitement prevails, as it is feared the depositors will lose. It is learned that early in 1879 Roswell R. Burrows, one of the wealthiest men in western New York, died, leaving an estate estimated at five to ten million dollars. The executors were his wife, his son William [illegible] Burrows, his son-in-law Alex Stewart, and A. S. Warner, and it is thought there has been considerable crookedness in the management of the estate on the part of Warner and that a fear of exposure and prosecution caused him to leave home. Warner since 1879 has had almost sole charge of the estate. He has speculated in stocks and is supposed to have lost considerable money in Wall street. Some time ago efforts were made in court to oust him as executor and a legal decision to the effect was rendered Monday. Nothing is known as to how much of the estate is left.

Albion, N. Y., Aug. 21.—Warner, president of the First National bank, left home August 13, stating that he was going to St. Catharines, Ontario, and from there would proceed to New York. He being the only person in possession of the combination of the lock of the inner vault, the condition of the affairs of the bank is not known, but no alarm is felt with regard to the ability of the bank to pay its depositors. The door to the inner vault will be drilled to-morrow.

Pleuro Pneumonia.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 21.—In view of developments respecting the presence of pleuro pneumonia among herds of Jersey cattle in Illinois, Governor Hamilton has called the state veterinarian board to meet here to consult upon steps to be taken. The herd where the trouble first appeared came from Ohio and one or two from the neighborhood of Washington, D. C.

Washington, Aug. 21.—Dr. Salmon, of the agricultural department, has made a report to Commissioner Loring, acting commissioner, upon the outbreak of pleuro pneumonia among Jersey cattle in Illinois. He says, in part: "This is the most serious outbreak that has occurred [illegible] and unless prompt action is taken to stop it the Jersey cattle interest in the west will be ruined and pleuro pneumonia will be beyond control. Several of the finest herds in the state are now infected. One affected animal in a herd examined to-day is worth $4,000. Some other animals in the herds are worth more than that. Dr. [illegible] says the state authorities have agreed to co-operate with the government in exterminating the disease."

Acting Commissioner Carman has telegraphed him: "Take all the measures deemed necessary and to the full extent authorized by law."

Officials at the agricultural department say this is the first time pleuro pneumonia has appeared in the west. They will make every effort to prevent the spread of the disease. Dr. Salmon, with four or five assistants, is at present engaged in trying to discover the parts of the country from which the cattle were originally shipped. The report of Dr. Salmon, which is a lengthy one, was anticipated in all the main features by the associated press dispatch from Chicago published this morning.

Schley Promoted to Commodore.

New York, Aug. 21.—President Arthur received at the Fifth Avenue hotel officers of the Greely relief expedition, including Commander Schley, Commander Coffin, Lieut. Emory, Chief Engineer Melville and a dozen others. Secretary Chandler and Lincoln and Gen. Butler, who had called to see the president, were present. Secretary Chandler informed Commander Schley that the president had decided to appoint him chief of the bureau of equipment and recruiting in place of Commodore Fardinghast, who commands the European squadron, with the office of chief of bureau in the navy department and with the rank of commodore.

Portsmouth, Aug. 21.—In answer to criticisms of his course in not going to Littleton Island, Greely says: "The tide between Cape Sabine and Littleton Island ran like a mill race and was full of heavy ice, rendering an attempt to cross exceedingly hazardous and well nigh impossible."

New York, Aug. 21.—Dr. Nagle, register of the bureau of vital statistics, to-day received from the navy department a certified copy of the minutes and Greely's report on the execution of Private Henry. On the authority of this report the record in the bureau was changed to read "instead of starvation," "shot by order of Lieutenant Greely."

Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 21.—Miss Dora Buck mailed yesterday papers establishing her relationship to Private Henry, and authorizing the coroner to take up his remains.

Leprosy in Jersey City.

New York, Aug. 21.—[Special.]—The Tribune's [illegible] sensation is the following: "The morning star [illegible] excitement prevailed at Jersey City over the report that a number of cases of leprosy have been discovered in that city. It is claimed there is no longer doubt that a number of lepers could be found among Celestial laundrymen. The county physician, when asked about it, said: "We are fully alive to the importance of the charges made, but can take no action until some specific complaint is formulated. It is a serious matter."

Dr. H. H. Cahill was seen. He said: "These Chinese generally live in basements with dark cellars in the rear, where no white man ever will [illegible] No one can tell how much disease is lurking in them. I am personally cognizant of a number of cases which I think are leprosy in the earliest stages. The disease is primarily caused by vice and filth, and the Chinese are addicted to both. I have no doubt that there are many cases concealed in these caverns right in the very heart of Jersey City, and [illegible] In San Francisco they are quarantined, and we will soon be obliged to do it here."

A number of other physicians express the same sentiments.

THE ATLANTIC AND PACIFIC PURCHASE.

Terms of the Agreement Just Entered Into—Huntington Interviewed.

New York, Aug. 21.—[Special.]—The New York news agency furnishes the following: The agreement just entered into permits the Atlantic and Pacific company to run its cars and transact business with San Francisco and other places over existing lines of the Southern Pacific and Central Pacific roads. The Atlantic and Pacific company may run trains direct to San Francisco at any time after giving notice. Until this is done a fair and equitable division of rates upon traffic passing over the line will apply to all business of the Atlantic and Pacific.

The price paid by the Atlantic and Pacific for the 242 miles of the Southern Pacific is unofficially stated to be about seven millions. The purchasing road will take possession of the line bought at once and on October 1 will open a fast freight line on routing with the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe and the St. Louis and San Francisco companies.

It is stated that the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad and the St. Louis and San Francisco road have entered into new obligations respecting new contracts. An officer of the first named company stated that the only new direct obligation of either of these companies is such as may grow out of any deficiency in the net earnings of the 242 miles of rail road purchased by the Atlantic and Pacific. The whole of the interest on the purchase price is but $4[illegible],000 per annum, and the liabilities of the Atchison and Santa Fe companies are respectively limited to one-half each of such portion of this amount as may not be earned by the section of road just purchased.

HUNTINGTON INTERVIEWED.

C. P. Huntington was seen by your reporter this morning and confirmed published reports about the purchase of 242 miles of the Southern Pacific by the Atlantic and Pacific, but said the price paid was $30,000 per mile. He said: "The Atlantic and Pacific people bid for a portion of the road two years ago and I gave some figures then, but no agreement was arrived at. I don't think any better freight or passenger time will be made by the new connection. Of course it is lease of the road from the Needles to Mojave Junction will be of great benefit to the Atlantic and Pacific railroad, but I can't see that California shippers will derive any extra advantages from it. Rates will be agreed on hereafter by the different companies. I am always willing to pro rate with any of them. I think the Southern Pacific is carrying a fair share of the freight business. The road has been pretty badly cut up lately, but is all right now."

RAILROAD NOTES.

A WAR ON RATES INEVITABLE.

Chicago, Aug. 21.—Railway men here express no hope that a war on passenger rates by trunk lines between Chicago and New York can be long averted unless the pool is reorganized. It is rumored that Pool Commissioner Pearson is coming west with that view. It could be traced to no definite source. Each line in the pool accuses the others of paying commissions through steamship lines. Representatives here of the Vanderbilt lines assert that they maintained rates until forced by the falling off in their passenger business to grant the same concessions as were made by the other lines. The belief is generally expressed that rates will go very low.

Democratic Tariff Medicine.

Washington Special.

A howl is being raised all along the line of democratic editors over what they term the cowardly action of the managers of the party in treating as an issue the tariff question. The principal speeches made on the tariff by democrats in the present con[illegible] were those of Morrison, Blackburn, Hewitt, Hurd, Cox, Springer, Randall, Mills, etc. The managers of the democratic national and congressional campaign committees carefully ignore this class of literature in selecting the documents to be distributed over the country, and not one of the above speeches has been sent. Both Les[illegible] and Senator Gorman are protectionists. They have selected protectionists as the superintendents [illegible] officers of the committee. The secretary of the congressional campaign committee is Representative Post of Pennsylvania, one of the forty that supported Randall in his war against the majority of his party on the floor of the house and who by the votes of these [illegible] prevented them from destroying the tariff laws. This organization which is in the congressional committee in the absence of Mr. Post as a protege of Sam Randall. Patenotre, French minister to China, has been instructed to acquaint China of the vote of parliament and also with the fact that the indemnity has been definitely fixed at 80,000,000 francs, payable in ten years. Unless the demand should be complied with within forty-eight hours Admiral Courbet would take the necessary steps forthwith to secure the reparation due France. The term of grace expired at 2 this afternoon. The French charge d'affaires was ordered to quit Pekin immediately and join Patenotre at Shanghai. Li Fong Pao asked for an audience with Ferry and announced to him that he had been ordered to his post at Berlin. The Chinese minister bade Ferry farewell and received his passport.

THE SOREHEAD'S SOLILOQUY.

For the Chicago Tribune.

To bolt or not to bolt, that's the question
Whether 'tis better to permit another
To be so petted by a smiling fortune
Or throw my vote against this Blaine of Maine,
And by opposing end him? To bolt—to fix?
No more than think of my party—and thus to end
This heartache and abnormal griping of my conscience
Caused by sure envy? 'Tis a consummation
Devoutly to be wished. To bolt—to fix—
To squelch! Perchance be squelched. Ay there's the rub
For if the vote should chance to be miscast
And Blaine get the presidential chair—
If I should stand off my party cat
And then get left on in the cold—
Two I make calamity of my after life
If we could lose the whips and scorns of men,
The democrats to sneers republican disgust
The pangs of disappointment, the long delay
Of longed for office, and the thought
That patient merit nevermore would win
Official recognition. That be the catapult
For the mounted a chestnut, the to [illegible] of those
I would not serve and be a lie deep sea
By them and cause I leave to be cast out
By both alike as neither fish nor fowl to be
Politically a bermaphrodite
Unloved by either sex, this fate I grant
Puzzles the will and makes me hesitate
Shall I not rather bear the ills I have
Than fly to others that I know not of?
Such fears as these make cowards of us all
And by them all my resolution
Becomes weak kneed and minus spinal column
And thus the road prudent enterprise
Bids fair to have its currents turned away
And lose the name of action.

A Ghastly Scaffold Scene

Vienna Correspondence London Standard

A ghastly scene occurred to-day within the prison at St. [illegible]. This morning a convict named Ferdinand Baumgartner, who several months ago murdered a prison warder, was to be hanged for the crime in the court yard of the prison. The spectators who had assembled to witness the execution included about seventy persons, in addition to a company of infantry specially detailed to preserve order. The convict, who was brought from his cell at 7 o'clock, turned a savage glare on the assembled persons as he walked past with firm step to the gallows. Arrived there, the executioner's assistant approached for the purpose of binding his arms. Muttering an imprecation he dashed the first assistant down and began fighting with the second and third. The struggle between the convict, who raved like a wild beast, and the executioner's men went on for several minutes before the soldiers were ordered to intervene. They soon overcame Baumgartner and the executioner now threw the rope around his neck. Another terrible struggle then ensued. Baumgartner, who caught with [illegible] mouth [illegible] for some time to wrench [illegible] from him. Even after they had first secured him the convict seized it again with his b[illegible] hands and uttering loud oaths defied them to carry out the sentence. At length, however, the executioner succeeded in forcing an irregular noose on the man's neck. For several minutes the struggle was resumed, and it was only by the hangman using his hands and dragging the convict down that he succeeded in carrying the law into effect, Baumgartner resisting to the last moment. During the night the convict, who had refused to see the priest, had remained very quiet. He was a very powerful young fellow, and had killed his jailor with a hatchet.

BABY SEALS.

How They are Caught and Their Behavior in Captivity—Their Harmless Character When Once Tamed and Their Ferocious Treachery When They are First Captured.

From the New York Mail and Express.

A number of baby seals, none of them being over two months old, attract much attention as they splash and sport in a shallow pond at one of the pleasure resorts on the Sound. They are in charge of Zoologist J. S. Barnes from the Central Park, who captured them and is now engaged in bringing them up and teaching them such amusing and interesting tricks as coming out of the water at a signal from him, shaking hands by extending their right flippers, climbing in and out of a boat and turning somersaults at the word of command. The keeper was feeding his little charges from the hand when a reporter for the Mail and Express engaged him in conversation a few days ago. The little fellows were so tame that the approach of the reporter did not alarm them. They merely surveyed the new comer out of their expressive eyes as they continued their meal of mackerel and seemed totally indifferent to his close proximity. A fine lot of seals ain't they?" remarked the keeper to the reporter.

"Yes, where did you get them?"

"I captured them on the northern coast of Maine a little over a month ago and brought them here in boxes packed with seaweed, which I kept thoroughly wet during the voyage. I gave them a bath of it every season."

"What species of seal are they?"

"They are what is commonly called the harbor seal, a variety of which is to be found along the coast all the way from Long Island sound to Baffin's bay."

"How do you catch them?"

"We—that is, myself and assistant—first locate the resting place of a whole school of seals, and while they are out feeding at flood tide fix our nets near the ledges upon which they retire to rest after gorging themselves. The nets are quite large and valuable, one of mine being a 60 fathom affair made of linen. After properly arranging the nets I retire with my assistant to a point from which I can watch the seals return, and then long [illegible] them and wait for nightfall. When darkness sets in we creep upon the school, our boat with muffled oars observing great caution until we get so near that their sentinels sound the alarm. Then we make a grand rush, and in the excitement that [illegible] and thoroughly frightened creatures and their young [illegible] for the water. The seals whose instincts are almost human [illegible] they are alarmed roll and drop off the ledges in such dismay that they are [illegible] to carry [illegible] and below an alarm all the while. It [illegible] then that the little fellows, having been pushed off the ledges by their frantic mothers become entangled in our nets and are captured before the old folks carry them off. May is the month for catching them, as that is the breeding season."

"Do you experience much difficulty in taking the young from the nets?"

"Well I should say so. By gosh that is the liveliest and most dangerous part of the sport, for the old ones when they recover from their surprise and realize that we are stealing their babies return to the rescue of their offspring and give us battle. They exhibit rare intelligence in trying to free the little ones and in addition to destroying the nets in their endeavors to liberate them are sometimes so aggressive that we have to beat them off with gaffs. The mothers carry off such as they can by getting them on their backs, and would you believe it, I gosh I've seen them actually dive with such as they could reach but were unable to rescue rather than surrender them to captivity."

"How do you get the captives out of the water?"

"By drawing our nets and slipping bags over the heads of the young rascals."

"Do they resist?" repeated the abductor of the baby seals. "Well I rather imagine they do. As docile as they now seem those there fought like little savages, by gosh, and did their prettiest to bite our hands and legs, while the old ones actually hung about and encouraged them to be ugly. They did, by gosh."

"Are those all you caught?"

"No, we bagged in twenty one. Six of them were drowned in the nets and the surf, the others trying to bring along two died on my hands and these are the others. Not one of those in the pond was over twenty one days old when captured. I weaned them on nourishing [illegible] about which I cannot talk, as it would be giving away one of the main secrets of the business if I did."

Tears stood in the eyes of all the seals as the reporter turned to leave. They had overheard the conversation and the recital of their ruthless abduction had deeply affected the intelligent little creatures.

A STRANGE EPIDEMIC.

Fish and Sparrows Around Madison, Wisconsin, Dying by Thousands.

Madison Wis. Journal.

For weeks past the perch in Lake Mendota have been dying by the thousands, and various theories have been advanced as to the cause, the latest being that it lay in a little worm which operates in the throat of the fish, thus producing strangulation. The remarkable mortality, the like of which old settlers remember occurred in about 18[illegible], has occasioned a vast amount of surmise and no little alarm, as it was feared that the putrifying mass of dead fish washed upon the shores would produce a pestilence of some kind. This, taken in view of the alarming prevalence of cholera and other contagions in the old world, has induced a still deeper interest in the subject.

At Marseilles, France, at the eruption of the cholera, the swallows of the city began to die and soon afterward abandoned their native haunts, entirely taking their flight to regions free from the prevalence of the pestilence. This flight impressed the inhabitants with peculiar fear, as they recognized in it an evidence of nature's instinct for self preservation, and the return of the little fellows was awaited with the greatest anxiety. Their departure from the cholera infected districts struck as some people would have regarded it as a bad omen to all parts of the civilized world by the telegraph, and men discussed the circumstance with the liveliest interest.

About ten days ago the swallows and sparrows began to die at the state insane hospital, and day by day many of the innocent creatures have fluttered helplessly to the ground and soon become dead. Great numbers of the birds abound around the hospital and the sudden and numerous deaths not only in the immediate neighborhood of the hospital but throughout the entire farm have occasioned a genuine surprise. The birds will suddenly drop to the ground while flying through the air overhead, in places entirely remote from telegraph wires, trees or other obstructions against which it is possible to injure themselves, and die without a flutter or any indication of pain. The doctors and attendants at the hospital have repeatedly thrown the birds into the air again in the hope that they would be able to resume their flight, but in every instance they have fallen back to the earth again to die. Governor Rusk has observed a few of the dead birds around his home and others residing on the shores of Lake Mendota have noticed the same phenomenon. Superintendent Buckmaster of the State Insane Hospital has a theory in regard to the cause of their deaths. He says that myriads of flies swarm upon the putrefying bodies of the dead perch upon the shores of Lake Mendota, where they feast, and that these flies are eaten in great quantities by the birds, which would indicate that the death of the latter is attributable to the same cause as that of the former. If the birds really do die from eating the flies, then the superintendent states that he believes the fish upon which the flies feed are poisoned with blood poisoning. The mystery of the fish mortality certainly deepens and is greatly intensified by the fatality which has so recently stricken the birds.

In this connection it may be well to say that a little boy residing in this city dived off the railway bridge into Lake Monona and was stung so severely in one of his eyes by some animal or insect at the surface of the water that he has not been able to use it in any way since. When he sustained the injury he saw no object and feels confident that it must have been done by some insect or worm very small in size.

From the Washtub to the Jury Box

New York Tribune.

The ordinary excuses will not avail women to escape jury duty in Washington territory. One lady, the wife of an ex-judge of the territory and the mother of a large family, the youngest child being only three or four years old, was in the midst of Monday's washing when the sheriff came to summon her to court to act as grand juror. She looked aghast at him. "Why, how can I go?" she exclaimed. But in two hours she did go, and vindicated the majesty of the law by helping to render a just verdict against a contumacious liquor seller.

MULTUM IN PARVO.

The New York Star (Tammany) says: "We fancy it will be a long time before Dan Manning is the power behind the presidential throne." To the careless reader these words would have no particular significance; and yet they are words of revelation and words of gall. Manning is chairman of the democratic state committee of New York and manager of Cleveland's campaign. He was the boss of the delegation at Chicago, and through his management the unit rule was enforced, the Tammany delegates were gagged and their votes counted against themselves and in favor of the men they opposed. Through Manning's iron rule every possible indignity was put upon the opponents of Cleveland in the delegation and the nomination was forced by methods which would have disrupted any other than a democratic convention. As Manning nominated Cleveland by these methods and is now the boss of the campaign in New York, with the certainty of being the power behind the presidential throne in case Cleveland is elected, the full meaning of the words quoted from the Tammany organ becomes apparent. Columns could not say more.

The so-called independent supporters of Cleveland are forced also to submit to unpleasant reminders. For example, Mr. David S. Foster, secretary of the civil service reform association of Utica, has written a letter reminding Mr. George William Curtis that the nomination of Mr. Cleveland was brought about by the enforcement of the unit rule by gag parliamentary law, by the use of the patronage at the disposal of the governor of the state of New York; in other words, it was the direct outcome of the machine in politics, that institution by which the will of the many is made subservient to the schemes of the few; also, "that the nomination of Mr. Blaine was rendered possible by the absence, in the republican convention and among the different state delegations, of this very machine influence;" and, though Mr. Cleveland has lately waved the flag of civil-service reform, it is well known that he did not become a reformer until after the removal of every republican who was in office at the time of his accession to the governorship. To this trenchant letter Mr. Curtis has made no reply. His "sovereignty" is "under the hat" of the Harpers, whose wrath against Mr. Blaine, as the publication of certain letters proves, dates from their failure to become the publishers of his book. These be "parlous" times, indeed.

RAILWAY RATES AND TRAFFIC.

Since 1880 railroads have been extended in the United States much more rapidly than traffic has increased. This fact will account for much of the remarkable depression of railroad stocks during the past year. Stated otherwise, the increase of traffic since 1880, though considerable, has not been nearly in proportion to the increase of railroads. The density of passenger traffic on the 120,000 miles of railroad now in operation in this country is not so great by an important amount as was the density on the 86,781 miles which the census found in 1880. If it were, the traffic of the country must have increased nearly 40 per cent., in about three years. In that time the population has increased about 12 per cent., the area under cultivation about 6 per cent., many manufacturing and some mining industries at a vastly greater rate, but certainly, altogether, not enough to make an increase of 40 per cent. in the traffic, especially not in passenger traffic to do which each inhabitant would have to travel one-fourth more than in 1880, when business was prosperous and passenger traffic good.

In Prussia, under control of the state, there are about 9000 miles of railway. To furnish a basis for comparison of traffic, one of our railroad statisticians combines our eastern roads which have heaviest traffic till an aggregate of 9000 miles is obtained; and it is found that the density of passenger travel on these selected American roads is just about equal to that upon the roads of the Prussian system. In Prussia first class fares per mile average 3.27 cents; second-class, 2.21 cents; third-class, 1.37 cents. The average rate on our roads of heaviest travel is about 1.80 cents per mile.

We have in the United States tens of thousands of miles of railway whose traffic is very light. A higher rate is naturally to be expected on these roads than on those which enjoy a very heavy traffic; yet the policy of reducing rates, always within judicious limits, as there may be opportunity to increase traffic thereby, is the true policy both for the country and for the railways.

NEED OF A NAVY.

Copies of the speech on the necessity of a navy, delivered by Senator Miller of California just before the close of the late session of congress, are being distributed throughout the country. The speech emphasizes the need of a navy in a way that ought to command general attention. Senator Miller truly declares that we cannot expect to be exempt always from war, and certainly shall not escape it if we continue to invite it by our defenseless condition. The power and influence of a nation in international councils are proportioned precisely to its capability to inflict injury upon its enemies. Moreover, the effect of the defenseless condition and non-combatant character of our government is to repress the spirit and destroy the courage of American diplomacy.

The fact that a foreign company, under the protection of a foreign power, is building a canal at the isthmus of Panama is adverted to as a menace to the United States, and yet our government is in no condition to make a protest or remonstrance. For how can the protest be made effective without a navy, and how strong will be the protest if our coast cities are left defenseless? The simple yet frequent question is soon to be upon us, "Do we intend to stand by and see the French government in military control of Panama? with exposure of the commerce between the two shores of our country to the absolute control of foreign powers? Are we not merely drifting, and drifting into serious complications?

Senator Miller pursues the subject in this vein through the different topics that it suggests. The speech raises questions of surpassing interest and importance. The day is coming when the country will be forced consider them.

"Sir John Lubbock," says the London Spectator, "added two happy phrases to the sarcastic literature which is accumulating on the subject of the 'passion of the peers for the franchise bill. George Eliot, he said, describes one of the characters—a certain boy—as being very fond of birds, 'that is to say,' she adds, 'of throwing stones at them.' Such was the fondness of the peers for the county franchise. 'In some parts of Australia, we are told, when a man marries, every one of his bride's relations gives him a blow on the head with a club, by way of a warm welcome into the family. This is the sort of way in which the lords have welcomed the franchise bill.' Sir Wilfrid Lawson leveled his ridicule chiefly at the house of peers. He remarked that when the Duke of Portland said he was in the house of peers by the will of God, he might just as accurately have said that every publican got his license by the will of God. Lord Salisbury, said Sir Wilfrid, had been encouraged to stand firm, very much in the same spirit in which the Spaniards of Madrid called out to a poor Jew—the victim of an auto-de-fe—'Stand firm, Moses.' Moses stood firm, and the consequence was one of the greatest conflagrations that Madrid had ever seen."

The New York Independent has withdrawn from the support of Cleveland, it is said on account of the Buffalo scandal. This is but an excuse, not the real reason. The Independent's circulation is and has been almost wholly among republicans. The proprietor has been hearing from his subscribers, of whom he has lost during two months many thousands.

NEW ENGLAND TOWNS.

In the Andover Review for August, the Rev. Samuel W. Dike presents a fairly correct view of the social and religious change that has taken place in the rural districts of New England within the past fifty years, but fails to give a clear idea of its causes, or to propose any effective remedy. The New England town was organized as a little republican unit by itself. It was a political, religious, educational and industrial community. It had its schools, its machine shops and home industries, its single church where all its families met and worshiped, its "town meeting," at which political questions and township affairs were settled. The community was united, its members exchanged with each other the products of their ingenuity and labor; but few necessaries of life were brought from afar. This close sympathy and inter-dependence in business and other matters was also manifested in religious affairs. But with the growth of manufacturing villages, the departure of the more enterprising young people to the cities and to the west, and the rivalry among those left behind for the possession of wealth, precedence and power, the character of these communities has greatly changed, and changed for the worse.

In a speech in congress on the last apportionment bill, Mr. Tillman made the remarkable acknowledgement for a South Carolina democrat that "the petty township of New England, as a legislative, administrative and judicial subdivision of the state—a sort of sovereignty of its own—is the greatest contribution to civil liberty that has ever been made by mortal man." The conception of this idea of little mass meetings of people living in election districts called towns, Mr. Tillman ascribed to John Adams, and said that in conceiving this idea Mr. Adams had done more for his country and the cause of human liberty than either Jefferson or Hamilton. John Adams taught his people to keep their political affairs in their own hands, and to escape the danger of a few influential and wealthy men or families using the law-making power for private ends by distributing the elective and legislative power widely through the community. "In other words John Adams instructed the New England people to look upon the township as the citadel of their liberties, while Jefferson advised the southern people to regard the states only, no matter how organized, as the palladium of freedom. Hamilton, on the other hand, told his people to lean on the one man power, or at the most to rely on an aristocracy of a few voters as the wisest course to have good government. And to-day," said Mr. Tillman, "Hamilton's spirit presides at the national capital, Jefferson's at the state capitals, and Adams' at the township halls," and he predicted that when the future historian shall come to write of the decline and fall of the great American republic, he will have to record that the last and most desperate struggle for liberty occurred in the shire town halls of New England.

This tribute of a southern man to the value of the New England system of political organization is as deserved as it might have been unexpected. But it is not true that the conception of it originated with John Adams. The New England forefathers, in organizing their communities, went back of the England of the seventeenth century to the older England before the Norman conquest, or the still older England in her early Germanic home, and revived the older forms of freedom and the older institutions of our soil. The town meeting is a revival of the primitive assembly, the gathering together of the body of freemen to make their own laws and to choose their own rulers, which appears to have been common at some period to the whole Aryan family of nations. Homer mentions it as one of the customs of the primitive Greeks. It existed in early Rome, and we find it in the first sketch of that Teutonic society, of which we form a part. The revival upon these shores, however, of this primitive conception of freedom is a fact of momentous consequence in its bearing upon our whole constitutional history. When the representative system is added to the town meeting we have the framework of our civil and political structure. "The talk of the village moat is the groundwork of English history. It was here that England learned to be the mother of parliaments." In the New England town meeting America learned to be the mother of free states and a free nation. This nation has been evolved in institutional growth from the town.

If, therefore, these New England towns are deteriorating, either in the character of their population or in their power of political unity, it may be taken as a sign that with the larger rights and responsibilities of our growing country have come new and serious dangers. The New England system could not have reached its famous degree of perfection except for the fact that the people were homogeneous and democratic. The power of our native communities to assimilate a large admixture of foreign population has nowhere been more fairly tested than in these New England towns. But the experiment has not been successful even there. There is a large Irish population in all the cities and manufacturing villages of New England, and many Canadian French. Boston is rapidly becoming an Irish city, and the worst feature of the present situation is the fact that the Irish do not become true Americans, but preserve their attachments and interests in the Ireland across the sea. They are not themselves entirely to blame for this nationalism. It has been fostered by the demagogues who trade in Irish votes, and magnify their consequence as Irishmen in order to secure their solid support in municipal, state and national elections.

Other causes also are operating to produce inequalities of rank, with their attendant social disquietudes. Men are not in any community equal in natural capacity, especially in the acquirement of wealth. The individual freedom and individual protection, combined with the commercial character of the age, have produced social inequality, and this leads to agitation and conflict, such as kept Rome in a state of turmoil for centuries, and hangs like a threatening cloud over the nations of Europe. The conflict exists in a milder form in this land of equal rights, but it is sufficient to impair in a serious degree the old democratic spirit of New England. In no state of society is the power of money, especially of organized capital, so great or so keenly felt as it is in a democracy. Organized capital is organized selfishness. It must be selfish and encroaching in order to protect itself. The main cause of this conflict lies deep in human nature itself. The remedy is not in striking at the right of individual property, in arraying labor against capital, but rather in the exercise by all of a broad, just and humane spirit. Personal considerations should be subordinated to the general good. And classes, instead of acting together as compact masses, should seek to identify themselves with each other, as members of a community in which one cannot suffer without injury to all the rest. All classes of our people in New England and elsewhere should strive to cultivate that old communal spirit which existed in the tuns of northern Germany, and was revived by the forefathers of New England, who covenanted together before leaving the Mayflower to enact such just and equal laws as would be for the common good. These old communities were strong in the mutual reliance of their members upon each other and their support of each other. The more influential of their numbers sought to carry important measures by the force of reason rather than by specious arguments or the more corrupting power of money, and indeed, such was the real respect of even the poorest that no other method could have been successful. The community reasoned together and the better reason prevailed, and they arrived at decisions in regard to public affairs which were for the common good of all, and no man or class of men was able to gain an unfair advantage over the rest. There must be a return to the old method and a revival of the old spirit, if New England is to be saved from that deterioration of politics and morals which makes Butlerism possible.

It is instructive to observe what hard conditions are laid upon political turncoats, yet how fully they submit and pretend they like it. A large part of the criticism of Mr. Blaine by the New York Times, the Evening Post and Harper's Weekly has been based on his opposition to Chinese immigration. They have denounced him as a demagogue seeking the favor of the lowest and worst classes of the country, and as unfaithful to the American idea of extending invitation to all the peoples of the world, just because he has insisted on restriction of Chinese immigration. But now Mr. Cleveland also says that such restriction ought to be insisted on, and they applaud. "He would not," says the Times approvingly, "encourage the immigration of those who do not want to become citizens." This is first-class organ-grinding.

The Paris correspondent of the New Orleans Picayune in a four-column letter gives the substance of a long interview he had with A. Dudley Mann, who was sent by the confederate states government as one of a commission to secure the sympathy of European powers with the act of secession. Mr. Mann, who is now, at the age of 83, living a quiet life in the French metropolis, gave the correspondent a copy of a letter which Pius IX. wrote "to the Illustrious and Honorable Jefferson Davis, president of the confederate states of America." Importance for the letter is claimed because, while it does not in the body of it recognize the confederate states as sovereign, the address was regarded by Mr. Mann as a recognition. This interpretation, however, was not agreed to by Judah P. Benjamin.

TOLD IN PARAGRAPHS.

In an action for breach of promise the other day in England, the defendant's counsel asked the fair plaintiff, "Did my client enter into a positive agreement to marry you?" "Well, not exactly," she replied, "but he courted me a good deal and told my sister he intended to marry into our family."

"There is a decided belief in New York among all persons who have traveled," says Gath, "that Chicago will pass this city in population. It is said that this year, for the first time, the interior cities have been almost entirely able to carry the crops of the country without sending to New York and getting huge sums of money temporarily for that purpose."

Will the time ever come when our American girls will become sensible as were their grandmothers when they were young, and know a good thing when they see it.

It is French custom that a lover shall kiss his betrothed on the forehead. It is not probable that lovers object to the practice per se, but a few years experience of it in combination with bangs has convinced that polite nation that either the bangs must go or the custom must be broadened to the American plan of kissing her wherever it comes handy.

It is excruciatingly funny to read in such a sad newly-converted newspaper as the New York Times headlines over the report of a democratic pow-wow in one of the slum districts of New York city like these: "Enthusiastic Democratic Demonstration," "Praises for Governor Cleveland," "The Republican Ticket Denounced." The former readers of that paper would naturally look in that paper for headlines like those over a report of a democratic meeting: "The Drunken Democratic Pow-Wow," "The Same Old Bourbon Crowd in Disgraceful Council," "Slanderous Attacks on the Republican Candidates," etc.

A seamstress was arraigned in a New Haven court on a charge of having stolen three gold coins from her employer. She blamed the theft on her baby. In order to find out the truth of her story, the baby, which was eleven months old, was brought into the court room and the three coins were placed on a table near its mother's chair. The baby looked at the coins for a moment, and then clutched them with a miser's eagerness, refusing to give them up. The seamstress was allowed to go free.

For richness of biographical material St. John, of the prohibitionists, leads all the rest. He ran away from his father in Indiana at the age of twelve; was a husband at 19, and a widower at 20; became one of the rough-and-tumble pioneers of the California gold diggings, and once ran barefooted over ice and frozen ground for two days with an anxious party of Indians after him; started for South America, and was wrecked without clothes or coin among the Sandwich islands; turned up as a country lawyer in Illinois; served in the army through the war, and got the rank of colonel, and finally "struck it" in the rum politics of Kansas.

Mr. Carl Schurz, says the Baltimore Herald, who is making democratic campaign speeches for a money consideration, has thus regained the good opinion of a number of people who once looked upon him as considerable of a fraud. The New York Times, for instance, is lauding him as a patriot of the highest type. In 1871 it declared that he had "no claim whatever to public confidence or respect." On February 24, 1872, it charged him with turning democrat because the republicans would not satisfy his extravagant demands for places for his relatives. Mr. Schurz has not changed greatly since that time, but the Times is using a different kind of spectacles.

A Labor Protest.

A circular issued by a labor delegation of the cities of New York, Utica, Syracuse, Rochester and Buffalo gives the following reasons why Mr. Cleveland should not be made president:

1. He vetoed the bill abolishing contract child labor in the charitable and reformatory institutions of the state.
2. He signed the bill reducing pilotage fees 20 per cent; a bill in the interest of foreign corporations.
3. He approved the law compelling working engineers to pay a tax of $3 a year for the enrichment of a pension fund of a liberally compensated body of public servants.
4. He vetoed the five-cent fare bill, a measure calculated to enable workingmen and their families to reach the suburbs away from the tenement districts at all hours.
5. He signed the civil service bill, a measure calculated to encourage only college educated citizens to reach the public service, thereby creating an aristocracy of office-holders.
6. He appointed a man to administer the bureau of labor statistics of the state of New York who was an opponent of the reforms which the labor interests (whose influence had created the bureau) had desired and formulated.
7. He vetoed the bill limiting car-drivers' hours of labor to twelve hours per day, thus confessing himself ignorant of the grave national question underlying the labor movement.
8. He vetoed the mechanics' lien law, a bill designed to give labor the first lien on a building in course of erection.
9. He failed to advocate in his message to the legislature urging prompt and practical legislation to meet the wish of the people expressed at the polls last election against the system of convict contract labor, which was declared "abolished" by a vote of 120,000 majority, brought out by the state executive committee of the labor organizations, and the success of which was largely contributed by the signers of this delegation.
10. His appointment of a majority of the members of the railroad commission of New York, who were hostile to the interest which created that board, thus defeating the object for which the commission was established, and making it a tender to the corporate monopolies of the state.

Danger of Trusting to Obscurity.

Salt Lake Tribune.

The statement made by Mrs. Halpin and wired to the country yesterday ought to be a lesson to all political parties in the United States. In the Chicago convention the democratic party thrust aside its party leaders, the men who have for years carried its banners and who have made national reputations. They were all thrust aside and a man without a record given the coveted honor. The notice which their act served upon the youth of the country was, that it was better to obtain a reputation by a stroke of blind fortune than to honestly earn it. They went home confident that their candidate's past was so obscure that it was safe from assault. Presuming on this, they started their campaign of reform and the disgruntled republicans joined with them to sing the praises of their new found treasure. Then came ugly whispers, then confirmation of ugly facts; but the party shouters come forward with an explanation which left their candidate in the position of the leading character in the scarlet letter after he made his confession. Once more the matter seemed to be progressing right, when here appears the story of the wronged woman herself. We are not discussing this matter with any desire to add to the political discussions of the day. The point we are seeking to make is that neither a man nor a party can afford to try to win a great point on a fraud, and especially no man can safely aspire to a position under a false cry. The rule is that whatever we have in this world we must earn, and though there are exceptions, the [illegible] rule holds good. Mr. Cleveland has never done anything to make him entitled to the honors and emoluments which attach to the office of chief magistrate of this nation, and when by his nomination he was put in rivalry with such chiefs as Thurman and Bayard and Pendleton and McDonald, and a multitude of others, [illegible], the act was a surrender of [illegible] to a mere chance exposure. [illegible] old democrat of the Jefferson and Jackson school must feel in [illegible] the standard bearer of his party now. Think with what a [illegible] the old chiefs of the party, who have [illegible] without flinching through all the stormy past, must contemplate the spectacle of Henry Ward Beecher, Carl Schurz and George William Curtis in deep consultation, trying to decide whether the standard bearer of the democratic party is pure enough to receive their support or not. If they should turn in revulsion, take the golden rule that men must earn whatever they get, it will not be in vain.

Butler Pokes Fun at a Critic.

BOSTON, Aug. 21.—General Butler is evidently going to get all the fun possible out of his campaign. He sent this note to a paper to-day.

To the Editor of the Star.

The editor of the Boston Herald does not seem to know enough to be wicked when he wants to be. He closes an article upon your valuable account in the Herald of Sunday as follows: "It is hardly believable that a man with his record can be a 'tinker's dam' in the principles of any party." Now, he evidently thinks that a "tinker's dam" is a curse word. Will you inform him that in the olden time, when traveling tinkers went about the country mending the holes in the kettles and pans, he frequently found one that was ragged and rusty so that the solder (iron) would not take, and he was obliged to fill it up with a mass of solder. To keep that solder en masse over the hole while in the heated state he was accustomed to take some crumbs of bread and moisten them and make a little ridge around the hole with the moistened crumbs to hold the solder in its place as he melted it in. This was what was called a "tinker's dam," which he brushed away after he had finished, as it was utterly useless, so that our Pilgrim Fathers used the words "not worth a tinker's dam," never dreaming that they were profane. The editor of the Herald evidently thinks he has been swearing all his life, when he hasn't and that he must soften the word down into "malediction." Yours truly,

BENJAMIN F. BUTLER.

Advertisements such as "Wants," "Help Wanted," "To Let," "For Sale," etc., will be inserted for ten cents per line first insertion, five cents per line thereafter. No insertion for less than 25 cents, and each must be paid at the counter. No bill for collection less than 50 cents.

Deaths, Marriages and Births fifty cents each. Resolutions of Condolence ten cents per line. All transient advertising payable in advance.

MURDEROUS ASSAULT.—Another of the chopping affrays which are becoming so fashionable among the Chinese citizens took place on Alder street near Second yesterday afternoon. The chopper was Ah [illegible] and the chopped one Chen Chung employed by [illegible] as assistant doorkeeper at the Chinese theater. It appears that on Monday last owing to the great attraction at the Chinese theater that temple of Thespis was so crowded that it became impossible for any more to get in and the sale of tickets was stopped. Ah Fe applied for admission and was refused by Chen Chung. Ah Fe was much offended and yesterday seeing Chen Chung [illegible] a [illegible] hauled out a little hatchet and sunk the edge of it into his shoulder near the point of [illegible]. The wounded man rushed out in the street blowing a whistle to a style that conveyed every hearer that the hatchet had not penetrated his lungs, and several policemen [illegible] to the spot. [illegible] Chen Chung made his way to the city jail where his wound was dressed by Dr Wheeler. It is not likely to prove serious. It is about time that an example was made of some of these Chinese choppers and shooters and wielders of iron bars. [illegible] punishment of a few of the offenders will put a stop to this kind of crime.

KICKED A DOGCATCHER.—Angelo DeMart[ini] was tried in the police court yesterday upon a charge of assault and battery and being found guilty was fined [illegible]. DeMartini is the keeper of a hotel at the corner of Fifth and Pine streets. Ah Lawrence [illegible] dogcatcher, who wears a star, attempted to assist J B DeFon[taine] in taking [illegible] trunk from the hotel to [illegible] [illegible] what he owed DeMartini. The latter became very much enraged at Lawrence and his high handed manner of proceeding, and thinking that he was policeman told him that if he would lay aside [his star] he would give him a good thrashing. Lawrence [illegible] [illegible] of a bruiser took [illegible] him at once. He had a surprise however. DeMartini kept his word and [illegible] DeFontaine a little when he had tried [illegible]. The two men not being able to whip [illegible] caused his arrest with the result as above stated.

THREATENING TO KILL.—John Cahan was arraigned in the police court yesterday upon a charge of threatening to kill his landlady Mrs Catharine D[illegible] who keeps a boarding house at the corner of [illegible] and D streets. [illegible] came into his head that it would be easy to wipe out an old score by killing his creditor. He accordingly [illegible] [illegible] that if he [illegible] would [illegible] [illegible] shoot her and one of her friends in [illegible] [illegible] the protection of the police Cahan was then arrested [illegible] [illegible] did not consider that a drunken man [illegible] [illegible] of much danger [illegible] Mrs Gentry's feelings [illegible] Cahan to [illegible] bonds to keep the peace.

PROGRESS OF THE WATER WORKS.—The laying of [the] thirty inch wrought iron main to connect the Water Company's new works at Palatine Hill with the [city] was completed on Wednesday. [illegible] the large size of the pipe the depth at which it is laid and the amount of rock [illegible] the work has been quickly done. The [illegible] main to connect the large main with the reservoir [illegible] from the city [illegible] nearly to Lincoln [street]. The pumps [illegible] [illegible] progressing favorably [illegible] [illegible] supply of this useful fluid.

PERSONAL.—Louis Jim Imbrie as he is familiarly called in Washington county where he is known and respected by everybody has been a very [illegible] [illegible] at Yakima W T where he removed some [time] since to attend to his extensive stock [raising interests] there. The almost torrid climate [illegible] where the thermometer takes the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Mr Imbrie who has long been accustomed to the [cool] prairies and shady timber of Washington county. He has been suffering from a severe attack of erysipelas and his recovery was for a time despaired of. His daughter Miss [illegible] [illegible] this city yesterday [illegible] to visit him.

THE NEW SOUTHERN STREETS.—Mult[nomah] and [illegible] streets forming the new exit from the city on the south are completed with the exception of [illegible] the block between Davis and [illegible] streets. The grade to connect with the macadamized road is [illegible] completed and in a short time when the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] thickness from the streets parties going out [illegible] this route will have a mile drive over a [illegible] [illegible] dashboard [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Porter street to connect with [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Front to [illegible] [illegible].

ALLEGED SLANDER.—Mr J B Colman advertising [illegible] of The Sunday Welcome has given bonds in the sum of $200 to appear before Justice of the Peace [illegible] on Monday next to answer the charge [illegible] [illegible] druggist. The alleged slander [illegible] [illegible] appeared in The Sunday Welcome [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the proper time.

FATHER AND SON AT PEACE.—The charge of assault and battery preferred against [illegible] was yesterday dismissed by Judge Moreland, an amicable settlement of the family [difficulty] having been made. From what was made public [illegible] evident that both father and son were [illegible] [illegible] The young man [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] filially for his father and may have [illegible] that he was not allowed [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] as the saying goes [illegible].

ART TEACHERS.—Miss Emma Cornelius who has for some time been connected with the art department of St Helen's Hall and whose pictures shown at the last exhibition of that institution were so favorably noticed by the press has been engaged to take charge of the art department of the Pacific University Forest Grove. Miss Fillick [illegible] who has been in charge of the art department at St Helen's Hall, has accepted a similar situation in the [Annie] Wright seminary at Tacoma.

WARMER.—The thermometer climbed up to 88 degrees yesterday one degree higher than on Wednesday. A light breeze [blew] directly from the north [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the heat which was unusually [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] The farmers are having [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] on a day like yesterday.

THE SEATTLE EXTENSION

The Northern Pacific Order their Rolling Stock Withdrawn from the Connecting Link
Probable Reasons Therefor

Yesterday orders were received by Mr J M Buckley assistant general manager of the Northern Pacific from President Harris, to withdraw the company's rolling stock from the extension between Puyallup and Seattle. This was done and the [line] is now temporarily abandoned. How long it will remain so no one at this time knows. The road was opened July 5 and did a nice through freight business as the transfer at Tacoma was thus avoided. There was also a good local business from the valleys which the line crossed. Though only about forty miles long the link has an [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] The northern half of the road was built by the Puget Sound Shore [company], which is controlled by the Oregon and Transcontinental company. The southern half was built by the Northern Pacific. When the road was finished the Transcontinental company [illegible] not [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] to stock its half so arrangements were made with the Northern Pacific [illegible] the latter [illegible] [illegible] line and [illegible] [illegible] rolling stock. From this it will be [illegible] [illegible] Northern Pacific has the smaller [illegible] in its power [illegible] [illegible]

There are two good reasons [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] from those handed [illegible] the Northern Pacific [illegible] general [illegible] [illegible] the Northern Pacific [illegible] [illegible] want to be [illegible] [illegible] twenty five or thirty miles of another company's road over which [illegible] [illegible] to reach its Puget Sound terminus. It wants [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] of the line [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] collects freight [illegible] all [illegible] [illegible] ments. Hence on all freight from the east [illegible] the Puget Sound [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] for the entire distance though [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] only a few miles against the Northern Pacific [illegible] [illegible]

Second—It was [illegible] [illegible] the Northern Pacific [illegible] the Puget Sound [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] trade of the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] San Francisco [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] shut the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] after [illegible]

Third [illegible] Puget Sound [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the Northern Pacific [illegible] [illegible] Seattle.

The above reasons are [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] likely that the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the Kalama branch, which was to give [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Seattle [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] However the Seattle [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] water way [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] all the railroads that could ever be built upon its shores.

STUART'S LATEST AND BEST PICTURE

[illegible] Stuart the well known artist has just completed a large painting on which he has been working and studying for the past four years, and which he considers his master [illegible]. The subject is one of the grandest pieces of the mountain scenery of this section which Mr Stuart has [attempted] to place on canvas, and he has been very successful in [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] To give any idea of the beauty and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the picture. The point of view is from [illegible] Cascade range [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] above [illegible] [illegible] Mt Hood. In the middle [illegible] [illegible] is seen the [illegible] [illegible] creek [illegible] [illegible] Hunter's [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] with brilliant [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] peaks [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] Cascade range [illegible] [illegible] crowned with [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] heights [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] of 200 feet [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] at the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

AT CHANCELLORSVILLE.

Stonewall Jackson's Charge on the Eleventh Corps—A Cavalry Regiment Sacrificed—Saved by the Artillery.

Frank Wilkeson in New York Sun.

Almost twenty-one years ago the army of the Potomac faced the army of northern Virginia in the dense wilderness surrounding Chancellorsville.

Hood's men were cooking their evening meal. Their arms were stacked; they were lying around their camp fires. In the dense woods beyond the Chancellorsville road the confederate infantry of Stonewall Jackson's command were massed in charging columns. Of the flower of the southern youth 25,000 stood in line in those columns. Their faces were ablaze with the light of battle. They had marched furiously all day to reach position. They were eager for fight.

Suddenly the air quivered, and the fierce charging cry of the confederate infantry resounded through the dense forest. Through the low hanging smoke of the camp fires the forms of the men clad in gray, as they rushed out of the covering pine forest, became visible to Howard's braves. There was a heavy volley of rifles, then a fierce yell, and then the Eleventh corps veterans ran into the woods, ran down the road, ran like fear confused rabbits in all directions. They were so eager to leave the presence of Jackson's charging troops that they neglected to unstack their guns. The Eleventh corps was swept before the rushing confederates as leaves before a strong wind. They were panic-stricken. Their senseless, cowardly flight threatened to be followed by a grave disaster to our entire army. If we had been disastrously beaten at Chancellorsville the confederacy would have been established. Baltimore, Washington and Philadelphia would have been promptly captured.

The hearts of the men who stood firm throbbed apprehensively as they saw the Eleventh corps stampede past them; saw them, in a blind frenzy of fear, dash against trees and fences. The ruthless confederates keenly pursued, merrily shot them, savagely bayonetted them. The whole army was on the verge of a panic. Down the road toward Gen. Sickles' position the victorious, shouting Virginians swept. It looked as if the Union would be lost that evening—lost not honorably in a bloody battle, but lost through a disgraceful cowardly flight. Fortunately there was an officer on the field who understood the art of turning defeat into victory by the use of well served, fresh artillery. He knew that the rash temper of the victorious infantry, who had been amusing themselves with the pleasures of the chase, could be softened by the iron hail belched forth from Napoleon guns.

This man was General Alfred Pleasanton. Coming in from the front, he was amazed at the serious condition of affairs. He saw that prompt and heroic action was needed. Yonder in the woods were 25,000 exultant infantry led by Stonewall Jackson. They were hurriedly re-forming their columns that had been disorganized by the eagerness of their chase after O. O. Howard's fugacious warriors. The flames from the rifles pierced the gathering darkness. If that charging column of troops were launched before our artillery could be brought into battery, the union cause would be lost before midnight. Time was priceless. The fate of the nation hung in the balance. Without an instant's hesitation General Pleasanton buried a regiment of his own cavalry command, the Eighth Pennsylvania cavalry, a small body of approved troops, commanded by Major Keenan, against Stonewall Jackson's entire force. This handful of men, with sabres whistling through the gray, smoke-laden air, charged with loud cries, the confederate corps.

It was a display of superb courage and patriotism. They were necessarily sacrificed. In ten minutes all were stricken from their saddles. But the fury of their onslaught delayed the confederate attack. The few guns of horse artillery that belonged to Pleasonton's command swung into action. He and his aids gathered such guns as they could. Picking up a gun here, a section there, a battery yonder, Pleasontown got these pieces into battery, and at the same time cleared the ground intervening between them and the woods (where Jackson's men were busy killing the survivors of Maj. Keenan's command) of fugitives, and prepared for battle. If Pleasonton saved the army he would save it by his native genius for handling artillery. Out of the wreckage of the Eleventh corps, the jetsam floating aimlessly on the field, more guns were gathered. Some of Sickles' batteries, that were massed in a near-by field, were brought into line. Pleasonton was ready. So was Stonewall Jackson.

There was the sound of an ocean of voices. There was a flash of light along the edge of the woods. The air became stiff with bullets. Out of their cover rushed the confederate infantry. Through the powder smoke they advanced rapidly, the head of their column flaming with the deadly fire of musketry and their fierce charging cry resounding. They got within range of Pleasanton's cannon. The brass guns opened on their dense lines. Men fell in heaps. The cannoneers, drunk with battle, sprang in and out from the muzzles of their guns. They grasped the spokes of the ponderous wheels and savagely checked the recoil of their pieces. Sponge staffs whistled through the air. As the fever of battle mounted to their heads, they recklessly charged their guns without sponging. The steady roar of the artillery drowned all other noise. The wind of the guns fairly lifted the charging column off its feet and threw them back in confusion.

The confederates broke for cover. Their officers reformed them, and again led them through the gathering darkness against Pleasanton's guns. Again they were thrown back. They nerved themselves for the third trial. The dauntless Stonewall infantry grasped their rifles firmly, and, drawing the brims of their slouch hats over their eyes, so as to shut out the sight of the flaming, death-dealing artillery, rushed to within fifty yards of our line. The iron hail crashed through their ranks. The bones of men snapped like glass. The wind of the guns picked men off their feet and hurled them back. It was physically impossible to advance further. Sullenly the Virginians retired to the protective cover of their dense forest. They were not whipped, as their superb fighting the next day clearly proved. But the keen edge of their high temper had been drawn in the fiery breath of well-served cannon. Their dead encumbered the ground. Our army was saved from utter defeat.

The Utility of Pain.

The utility of pain is seen in the membrane which sweeps the surface of the eye, for instance, in several animals, whenever an irritant party is brought into contact with these delicate structures. The pain caused by the foreign body sets up reflexly a muscular contraction in this membrane, and thus it is brought across the eye, sweeping the surface, and so the offending matter is removed. When the foreign body is too fixed to be removed disorganization of the eye follows, and amid a general destruction of the organ the irritant matter is got rid of. Destruction of the eye in these animals would be a common occurrence if it were not for this muscular arrangement, and pain is the excitant; it is, as it were, the finger which pulls the trigger, and so the machinery already provided and prepared is set in action thereby. In man the suffering caused by a foreign body in the eye calls the attention to the part and leads to its removal. If it were not for the pain so produced irremediable mischief would often be permitted to go on unchecked, because unnoticed. Not only does pain so defend the eye from the injurious effects of foreign bodies, it often serves to protect the delicate organ from overwork; and where pain is produced rest is given to the part, and recovery is instituted. Especially is this seen where the eyes are not an absolute pair, and long perusal of a page strains them. Proper spectacles making the eyes a pair give prompt and permanent relief. The grave diseases of the eye are those which are painless, where incipient disease is aggravated by persistent action, all of which would be avoided if the pain were a consequence of the malady.

Good Salmon Fishing.

Montreal Witness.

Mr. Hogan of the St. Lawrence hall returned yesterday from a salmon fishing excursion to the Riviere Ste. Anne des Monts, where he was accompanied by Mr. Maurice Cuvillier, Colonel Egerton, late of the Rifle brigade; Mr. Wason of Liverpool; Mr. Laurence Hogan and Mr. Thos. Wilson, and the fishing was uncommonly good up to Thursday the 17th inst., when Mr. Hogan left, and up to that time the party had caught 120 fish, of which Mr. Hogan killed 7. This morning he received a letter from Mr. Cuvillier, announcing the capture of 45 more up to the 22d inst., making 165 in all. The average weight of Mr. Hogan's fish was 22 pounds. Colonel Egerton secured one weighing [illegible] pounds, and the party propose to remain until the 15th of August. The Riviere Ste. Anne des Monts is owned by Mr. Hogan.

Sir William John Codrington died on Friday of last week, aged 80 years. He was a son of Admiral Sir Edward Codrington, G. C. B., and an older brother of the late Admiral Sir Henry John Codrington. He entered the British army in 1821, and distinguished himself at the battles of Alma and Inkerman, and during the siege of Sebastopol. He was commander-in-chief of the British forces in the Crimea from November 1855, until the close of the war. He was placed on the retired list in 1877, and since the death of Sir Richard England he was the senior general on the retired list.

TRADE AND COMMERCE.

THURSDAY, Aug. 21.

A week of bright weather with the thermometer hanging about 73 at noon has passed. This has been highly favorable to harvest operations and all work is being hurried. The produce lines have shown small change, fruits being in large movement and cheapening. The larger lines are in little business, but show weakness, mostly because of a slack demand. In the way of imports only a domestic movement is had, but that is larger. Rail receipts have been nothing out of ordinary. A break in the road through Montana by reason of waterspouts has closed the movement eastward, no fruit by express being sent yesterday and no freight for points east of the break being taken to-day. This has blocked the fruit market and piled up a heavy stock here that must be sacrificed. The grain markets continue to droop and there is now no profitable outlet for our cereals.

An advance in Oregon Improvement stock is reported and other Oregon stocks are firm. Eastern railway stocks are off and quotations will rule more or less irregular until the roads can secure enough business to promise paying dividends.

FREIGHTS—The City of York still constitutes the list of available spot tonnage and her owners are not inclined to recognize the general weakness by accepting an obtainable rate. The W. H. Starbuck, 1272 tons, now at San Francisco, has been taken up for New York berth at Astoria. In the way of futures there is nothing at present being done, but several vessels have been added to the list as en route. Tonnage is freely offered on the market with bids of 50s for iron for orders being refused in the past two days. This is 2s 6d less than last reported business. Owners will not follow bids and the result is a dull market and no transactions. The South American ports are said to be full of ships that would willingly come here for 52s 6d and the Australian ports are almost as crowded. Mail advices say steamers are carrying grain for 30s with this rate threatened with cutting. By reason of business failures and other causes many ships have been thrown back on the owner. This advice is of a month ago and the market then presented no appearance of strength. At San Francisco a light business is done at rates not materially changed, but showing weakness. Until there is an increased demand for our wheat from the other side rates cannot be expected to improve and guesses as to the future are widely apart. More is being done in lumber freights from this coast.

WHEAT—The English markets have steadily shown weakness. No. 1 shipping California prompt shipment declining one shilling in the week. Chicago is off to 79c, and New York has ruled irregular. At San Francisco the market has not quotably fallen off, but is weak, with shippers operating slowly. Locally no sales of consequence are reported, and receipts are small. Quotations are next to impossible, $1 20@1 25 being named for valley but the outside figure is largely a fancy one, as it could hardly be obtained in open market. For Walla Walla $1 15 is the top figure. City dealers have bought from wagons at 70@75c per bushel for the filling of small orders. The crop is not yet harvested, so that sellers are not trying the market to any great extent. Wheat is now so low that any further decline abroad must result in a hard fight between freights and wheat, with the chances being in the latter's favor just now. Last year's experience can be repeated only in a small way under existing circumstances, a plentiful crop favoring the charterer of ships to arrive. To this date he has done little in the way of providing against needs, being averse to putting out money far ahead. Altogether the situation is one that calls for study on the part of the operator. Present quotations all around allow small margin for export. Letters from Marion county beyond Salem say the grain is of excellent quality, and shows no discoloration. The stain recently referred to is less general than feared, and is confined to sections then named.

FLOUR—Standards are in light stock, which admits of $4 75 being obtained. Mills are doing nothing with new wheat as yet, so that the flour market promises to continue up for a time. Outside brands in liberal supply at old prices.

MILLSTUFF—Jobbing values are firm under limited stocks; surplus bran moving forward to California, and millers maintaining first values. Jobbing values are: Bran, $14@16; chop, $22 50; shorts, $18; middlings, $25. Ground barley again in liberal receipt and selling at $24@26.

OATS—Dealers name 28c@30c for feed qualities. Offerings are large, with only a local call to be met. Present business is mostly in new. Extra heavy, suitable for milling, would command an advance.

POTATOES—Market slow and dull at 40c@50c per cental, and shows absolutely nothing of new interest. Sweets sell at 5c.

ONIONS—In steady movement at $1@1 25 per cental for California qualities.

PROVISIONS—Market irregular, by reason of exhausted stocks in some directions, but firm. Bacon scarce, very little being in stock, with last sales up to 14½c. Oregon hams quite out of market, but are not wanted at 15c@17c. Eastern in light stock at present, and quoted at 17½c@18c. Shoulders selling at 9@9½c, with a possible advance for the coolest. Lard steady at 11c@12c for kegs, 12c for common tins and 12½c@13 for best eastern tins.

DRIED FRUIT—Quotations are not changed, but are partly nominal, by reason of the general weakness, particularly in early sorts. Quote: Sun dried apples, 9@10c; factory, 15c@16c; eastern barreled, 9½c; pears, 15c; peaches, in sacks and boxes, 13 to 14c; prunes, 8c; plums, 13c@14c for sun dried, and 16c for factory; figs, 9c; raisins, $1 75@2 per whole box.

GREEN FRUITS—Quite a stir has been occasioned by reason of wild reports of good shipping markets eastward, but late shippers can form a better opinion than local writers, they having what is commonly called the experience. It is not given out who has the money, there being little of it for anyone. Apples bring 60@75c, the Gravenstein being the favorite. Pears are demoralized. Large orders from canneries not having materialized to the extent expected and Bartletts sold off to 75c. Canners have evidently lost on pears as a San Francisco commission house telegraphs this morning, saying: "Oregon Bartletts no good; canners name 90c as best figure." Evidently they have not the desired keeping qualities. Other varieties are in market and variously quoted at 50@60c. The closing for a few days of the eastward movement will pile up stocks here. Shipments are made in every possible direction in order to work off stocks. Peaches sell at 7c per lb, plums at 2c for choice, tomatoes at 2½. Melons plentiful at $2 50 per dozen; cantaloupes $4 per crate.

TROPICAL FRUITS—Demand only fair and values steady. Oranges $5, lemons $9@10, bananas $3 75 per box; limes $1 50 per hundred.

VEGETABLES—Quote cabbage 1¼@2c per lb; root vegetables $1@1 50 per sack.

CHEESE—Best local, 16c; good, 15c; imported, 15@16c; inferior kinds, 10c@12c.

BUTTER—Firm with lessened arrivals. Good local roll and eastern, 21c; fancy local and California roll, 27½c.

POULTRY—Market steady, and evenly supplied at $4@5 for old, and $2 50@3 for young chickens. Ducks firm at $5@6; geese slow at [illegible].

EGGS—The quality of arrivals shows improvement, and 25c is had to-day.

HAY—Quote $[illegible]. The market presents nothing of new interest.

HIDES, ETC.—Quote dry selected, 15@16c; green salted, 7@8c; Tallow, 5½@6c. Furs and skins steady at: Dark beaver $3, small 75; valley summer deerskins 27½c, do winter do 20c, eastern Oregon summer do 22½c, do winter do 18c per lb, elk skins 12½c per pound. The following sell by the skin: Black bear $1@10, brown do 50c@$5, dark fisher $2 50@6, pale do 50c@$1, silver fox $5@25, cross do $1@5, red do 75@$1 50, lynx 37½@50c, prime dark marten 25@75c, dark mink 25@40, land otter, $1 50@5 50, wolf 37½@50c.

HOPS—Picking begins in the Puyallup and White river sections about the second week of next month. Samples of unripe heads are shown at Seattle and other points that indicate a crop of good strength. The markets have not materially changed in any respect, and there is little inquiry ahead with nothing being done, buyers and growers holding widely different views. Last New York mail dates report: "The market has not developed any new or important feature. Reports as to the condition of the crops are conflicting from abroad and the interior, but there is a scarcity of export orders and brewers are purchasing only sparingly, which gives to the market a dull and tame appearance. We retain former quotations, but they are entirely nominal.

WOOL—The local market shows an entire absence of anything like selling, and there are no buyers who would go out of their way to do anything. The nominal quotations are 12 to 17c as to kind. The eastern markets have ruled fairly steady. The New York Commercial List says: "While the demand has not been brisk, a fair amount of business has been transacted, and the market is still characterized by firmness for all desirable grades, and the tone though not buoyant, is decidedly stronger. Manufacturers continue to display increased confidence and are less urgent in their demands for concessions, at the same time showing more disposition to provide for future requirements; in fact, some, whose mills are now closed, have been buying rather freely, thereby taking advantage of what they consider a favorable opportunity to lay in stock. Dealers retain firm views, and are apparently satisfied with the situation, while shippers from the interior have, in several instances, placed a limit on their consignments, indicating a substantial advance. The volume of business at Boston shows increased proportions, and some inquiry from speculators is noted, while it is intimated that the latter are being attracted by the comparatively low prices ruling here.

THE MERCHANDISE MARKET.

Jobbers have enjoyed a demand that has led to less complaint. Values show no change of note and indolence have remained very much as last reported.

The San Francisco Commercial News of last week says: The arrivals by sea of assorted merchandise from the east and foreign ports have been unusually heavy. Coffee is less buoyant and the week has been a quiet one; sales have been moderate for local consumption and quite light for eastern account, the latter amounting to 500 bags for the week, the chief inquiry being for good grades. In refined sugars the regular listed rates are maintained, and a good healthy trade is reported. For the past two weeks there has been a steady demand for Hawaiian raw of light grades, the bulk of all received meeting a ready market. Sales are reported for the week of 1,260 bags within the range of 5⅜@6⅛c. In China rice a slight decline from quotations of last week is noted in new mixed, and the market is weak by reason of excessive stocks. Hawaiian rice is in demand and prices steadily hardening. Codfish are steady at rates long current; the cargoes of the Czar and John Hancock have nearly all been marketed; two cargoes are now due from the fishing grounds. Salt salmon in barrels are now quoted at $6.00@7.00, and half barrels at $3.00@4.00, the former in fair stock and the latter scarce. A round lot of Alaska salmon in barrels was recently sold at $5.25. The 10,230 sacks Liverpool salt received per ship Wasdale has weakened the market; quotations are unchanged, but represent the jobbing price which is still maintained as the demand is light. Concessions from these rates would be made to purchasers of round lots. The state of the bag market is best shown perhaps by the recent sale at auction of 160,000 standard Calcutta grain bags at $5 30 per 100 and 10,000 at $6 07½. The supply is very large and at the auction rate there is no profit to importers and holders and but little margin at regular quotations. The stock of tin plate has been increased 18,000 boxes by arrivals from foreign ports during the week, which keeps the price down, but as there is a steady demand for canners' use an improvement is expected soon.

SHIPPING NOTES.

The Oregon crossed out this forenoon.

The ship Southern Chief, which went ashore in Royal Roads last year, is now beached near the wharf at Esquimalt. She is being placed in seagoing condition. Last Tuesday riggers were placing topmasts and spars in position. Steam pumps are constantly going, as she is in the water at high tides. A short time will be required to replace lost copper and stop leaks. The Southern Chief was built at Bath in 1867, and is good for several years' service yet.

Work on the sunken collier Umatilla in Esquimalt harbor is now forward. On Monday she was raised sufficiently to move her close into the wharf, where she now lies, bow on, in over twenty feet of water at low tide. Workmen began Tuesday tearing down the coffer dam work above the water line in order that she may be lightened and moved further on the beach. Her topmasts are gone and her smokestack is out of line. Inside and out the hull is very foul. On the starboard side several plates are broken or stove, which will have to be repaired. As soon as possible she will be taken to San Francisco for final repair. Capt. O'Brien went over Monday, and the next day was working around the vessel that he did so much to save. As she now lies nothing can be seen of the hull other than the bow aft to the forward hatch and some ten feet of her hull forward. A force of machinists and mechanics from Victoria are at work on the engines as far as exposed.

"Her sallowness, and looked as fresh as a new-blown daisy. Well, the story is soon told. My wife to-day has gained her old-time beauty with compound interest, and is now as handsome a matron (if I do say it myself) as can be found in this county, which is noted for pretty women. And I have only Hop Bitters to thank for it.
"The dear creature just looked over my shoulder and says, 'I can flatter equal to the days of our courtship,' and that reminds me there might be more pretty wives if my brother farmers would do as I have done."
Hoping you may long be spared to do good, I thankfully remain,
